六、阅读理解(每小题 2 分, 共 40 分)

A [2022 • 抚顺]

Mr. Ma is an old man with no kid. He lives alone and most of his friends and relatives live abroad. Wang Lei is a fruit seller nearby. They live in the same building. Once Mr. Ma fell down on the street. Wang Lei found him and sent the old man to the hospital in time. Wang Lei didn't leave until the old man recovered (康复). After the old man went back home, Wang Lei cared about the old man in daily life. When he knew more about the old man, he decided to live with him. Wang Lei and his family gave him good care. The old man felt happy.

Now the empty house is filled with warmth and happiness. The old man and Wang Lei’s family live together. Other neighbors often hear their laughter (笑声). Mr. Ma regards (对待) Wang Lei as his own son and wants to provide something valuable (有价值的) for him. But it’s inevitable for Wang Lei to refuse his thanks. All the people around them praise him for his kindness.

Mr. Ma says he’s lucky enough to meet Wang Lei. He cares about the old man and the old man gives back love and care, too. Their love and kindness for each other are a good circle.

We hope that there are more warmhearted people like Wang Lei, so that love can make the world kind and bring warmth among people.

31. Wang Lei is Mr. Ma’s _____ according to the passage.

B

When you are sad, you need to find ways to deal with your sadness. When you learn how to deal with your sadness, you’ll find your own happiness.

Accept your sadness. It’s not a bad thing to feel sad. Try to face what is making you feel sad. Don’t pretend it isn’t there. And don’t believe it will just go away by itself.

Speak about your sadness. You don't have to tell everybody everything, but it is nice to talk to friends or family about your feelings. You may not need him or her to say a word; just having someone to listen to you is sometimes enough.

Put your sadness into written words. Write down how you are feeling every day and why you think you are feeling this way. Write down how you deal with your sadness and which ways work.

Take part in activities. Read a good book, listen to music, exercise or take a walk outside. These can help you feel comfortable and forget your sadness.

See a doctor. If your sadness starts to interfere with your everyday life seriously, you should ask your doctor for help.

36. The writer encourages us to be _____ in the face of sadness.

- A. brave B. blind C. proud D. nervous

37. According to the writer, we must make sure _____ when we speak about our sadness.

- A. our friends speak a lot
B. we tell everybody everything
C. someone listens to us
D. we only talk to our family members

38. We should _____ if our everyday life is seriously influenced.

- A. take exercise B. accept our sadness
C. listen to music D. see a doctor

C [2023 • 泰安外国语学校月考]

I have three children and I make them do housework. However, my mother-in-law (婆婆) doesn't agree with me. She thinks I'm much too harsh. In her opinion, it is adults' job to do housework.

I think our family is made up of five family members. No one in the family is more important than others, so each member should help with chores. I don't ask my children to do the same chores, because their ages are different.

At the end of the day, after they finish playing with their toys, I ask them to put the toys away. If they don't, they will have to say goodbye to their toys. I expect my children to set the table at night and help fold their own clothes. I don't think I'm asking too much.

I know they are tired after a long day's study at school, but that's life — harsh but real. I don't want to pay them for doing some chores. They live in the house, so they should help out with some things in the house. No one is going to pay them for cleaning up their rooms later in life and I'm not about to start doing it now.

Some parents protect their children too much from anything unpleasant (使人不愉快的) and make their children's lives too comfortable and safe, but I'm not interested in that way. I hope my children are able to look after themselves and can be independent early.

39. What can we learn about the writer's mother-in-law?

- A. She doesn't get on well with the kids.
- B. She doesn't like doing housework.
- C. She doesn't want the children to do housework.
- D. She doesn't want the writer to do housework.

40. When the writer asks her children to do chores, _____.

- A. she often asks them to do the hard ones
- B. she often asks them to do the easy ones
- C. she asks them to do different ones
- D. she asks her mother-in-law for advice

41. The best title for the passage may be “_____”.

- A. Parents should protect children
- B. Children should do housework
- C. Parents shouldn't do housework
- D. Children should understand parents

答案	39—41

Are fables (寓言故事) and fairy tales (童话故事) different or the same? They are both stories for kids, but fables are stories for adults as well.

A fable is a story, passed down from grandparents to parents and then to children. People can learn much from it. The characters are mostly animals and nature. They can talk and act like humans. The most famous fables were written by a man called Aesop. There are around 600 fables in Aesop's Fables. The Fox and the Grapes and The Tortoise and the Hare are two examples.

Fairy tales are usually stories for children, often about magic characters such as fairies (仙女) and giants (巨人). Sometimes the characters are animals. We are able to enjoy these fairy tales because about 200 years ago, Brothers Grimm traveled all around Germany and collected these stories before people forgot them. There are many fairy tales in Grimm's Fairy Tales, such as Cinderella and The Frog Prince .

42. What does the passage mainly talk about?

- A. Famous fables and fairy tales.
- B. The skill at reading fables.
- C. The reason why adults can read fables.
- D. Differences between fables and fairy tales.

- A. 流传
- B. 分享
- C. 编辑
- D. 记录

44. Which of the following is TRUE?

- A. People can learn nothing from fables.
- B. There are about 60 fables in Aesop's Fables.
- C. Children usually love fairy tales.
- D. Aesop collected fairy tales before people forgot them.

45. Which of the following stories are fables?

- ① The Lion and the Mouse
- ② Snow White
- ③ The Tortoise and the Hare

④ The Fox and the Grapes

⑤ Cinderella

- A. ①②③④⑤ B. ①③④ C. ①②④ D. ②③④⑤
