

Once there lived a kind and lovely girl. After her father's death, her stepmother became cruel to her. Her two step-sisters teased her, asking her to do all the housework.

Cruel as her
stepmother was to her, Cinderella still lived an optimistic life. She had a lot of animal friends.

One day, the king held a party for the prince to choose the girl he loved. Every maid in the town was invited to the party. The stepmother took her two daughters to the party, leaving Cinderella at home, because she was jealous of Cinderella's beauty.

Cinderella was broken-hearted. At that time, her fairy godmother appeared. Your fairy godmother? Of course. Now let's see, hmm...now...the magic words. Bibbidi-boddidiboo. Put them together and what have you got.

Oh, it's beautiful! It's like a dream, a wonderful dream
come true.

Yes, my child, but
like all dreams, well,
I'm afraid this can't last forever. You'll have only till night
and...

At the party, Cinderella danced with the prince all the time. Time passed quickly. All of a sudden, Cinderella caught sight of the clock on the wall. Oh, it is almost twelve o'clock-five to twelve!

Oh, my goodness!

The next day, every maid in the town was ordered to try the glass shoe. Whoever the shoes fitted well would be the bride of the prince. No one could put on the shoe, nor could the two step-sisters. When the officials were going to leave, Cinderella appeared and asked to have a try.

以上内容仅为本文档的试下载部分，为可阅读页数的一半内容。如要下载或阅读全文，请访问：<https://d.book118.com/098021017031006070>