五、阅读理解（30分）

14、I grew up in the countryside and helped my parents do lots of housework and farm work. So I learned more life skills than my peers (同龄人) who grew up in cities.

I learned to cook when I was 10 years old. The first skill that I learned was making dough (面团). I thought it would be easy because I often saw my mom do it—just mix water and flour (面粉). Actually, it's not easy to make delicious dough unless you keep trying over and over again.

Later, I learned to make dumplings. I fell in love with cooking. It's a good way to relax. Now working from home, I usually cook meals instead of ordering delivery (点外卖). It saves money and I can eat healthily.

Besides cooking, I did a lot of farm work in my childhood. I learned how to plant vegetables. I shared my experience with my friend from the city, they thought it was a pity that they didn't have the chance to learn these things in their lives.

I am so happy to hear that labor education is required (开展劳动教育) in middle schools in China now. I think these life skills will help you for the rest of your life.

1. What was the first skill that the writer learned?

- A. To make dough. B. To make dumplings. C. To make noodles. D. To make fried fish.

2. Which of the following is NOT true according to the passage?

- A. The writer eats healthy because he usually cooks at home by himself.
- B. The writer had more life skills than peers who grew up in cities.
- C. The writer's friends didn't want to learn how to plant vegetables.
- D. The writer fell in love with cooking.

3. What's the purpose of the writer?

- A. To tell us that labor education is important in the life.
- B. To remind us not to cook because of take-away food.
- C. To tell us that cooking is too hard to learn.
- D. To tell us living in the countryside is terrible.
