It is a live celebration of the lasting power of letter writing!

Letters Live, which started in December 2013, was held at the Freemasons' Hall in London from March 10 to 15. The show invited various great performers who read remarkable letters that had been written around the world over the centuries.

“Bringing letters alive through outstanding performances is one tragedy of being human can be shared , ” Jamie Byng , managing director of Canongate Books publishing firm, told the Nowness video channel。

British actor Benedict Cumberbatch agreed. “Letters are windows into the love, beauty, pain and humor of their creators and receivers, ” he told The Guardian。 “Letters Live makes us stop and imagine the lives behind the letters read and where they came from. It’s a privilege to read this most ancient of communications live to an audience.”

This year , the movie Sherlock star treated the audience by playing the part of a 17—year Tom Hanks。 He put on the young actor's voice when he read his letter to the Hollywood director George Roy Hill, a letter that urged Hill to “discover” him. The letter revealed that two—time Oscar winner Hanks’ teenage dream was not to “be a big—time Hollywood superstar” but to one day own a Porsche car and call his favorite US actor Robert Red ford his nickname “Bob”。

Other famous faces at the event included Carey Mulligan, who played a fictional laundry worker, a female activist fighting for women’s rights in the 2015 movie Suffragette。 The British actress once again played the role of a suffragette , when she read a very enthusiastic letter demanding the vote for women 。 The suffragette sent a precious 1913 note to The Daily Telegraph newspaper。

Pingelap, a tiny island in the Pacific, is a beautiful spot but one that has a' genetic trouble。 It is known as Colour—blind Island because so many people who live on this remote island can only see in black and white。

Not being able to see in colour is bad enough。 But one islander, Herrol, who's a fisherman, also struggles in full sunlight because all he sees is a painful burnt—out image. “I find it difficult to go outside in the sun,” he says, “because when it's sunny I cannot see to do my work.”

But if being truly colour—blind is rare, why is it that around 10% of the population of Pingelap live in a totally black and white world?

Well, we know that in 1780 the population of Pingelap was all but wiped out by a tsunami (海啸)。 As few as 20 people survived, one of whom was the king. It's believed he had a genetic fault that causes colour-blindness and he passed this fault on to his many generations。

There is one advantage。 Herrol can see well, really well, in the dark。 So when it gets dark, Herrol and his friends get in their boats and hunt flying fish. They hang up flaming torches and the fish are attracted to the flames。 “This type of fishing is fun,” Herrol says, “especially if we catch plenty. So even though it's hard work we enjoy it.”
