If someone said they’d pay you $1,800 to stay off social media for 6 years, could you do it? Could you? An American mom challenged her son to do just that, and he succeeded.

Sivert Klefsaas is the youngest of Lorna Gold-strand Klefsaas’ four children, and his three older sisters all used social media growing up. It was influencing their feelings, as well as their friendships. So, Lorna thought, “If I could, I’d be willing to do whatever to keep Sivert off social media as long as I could, whatever that looks like.” And that’s where the idea for this challenge came from.

It all started when Lorna heard about a similar “16 for 16 challenge” on the radio, where a mother called Amanda Green gave her daughter Teresa $1,600 when she turned 16 if she stayed off social media. So, Lorna decided to create her own “18 for 18 challenge”. Not only did Sivert finally complete this challenge, but he would do it again, too.

“It wasn’t too difficult to live without social media, and I didn’t think about it much during the 6 years,” Sivert said. “As time went on, it was more of a proud thing.”

He had his friends keep him up to update on the latest information. Sivert added, “I got to avoid all the unnecessary things that were on there. It also meant I had more time to focus on my grades and sports instead."

Now that he's done with the challenge, Sivert joined Instagram (照片墙), but has no plans to let social media define (定义) him.

"Social media is great. We certainly need to use it," Sivert said. "But also make sure you spend time in other areas of your life, especially those personal relationships."

Still, Lorna is proud of her son's success. "We are certainly not against social media, but it's the healthy using of it," Lorna told CNN.

23．How did Sivert get the latest information?

A．By surfing on the Internet.

B．Through the radio.

C．By talking with his friends.

D．Through the social media.

24．What does Sivert think of social media now?

A．Social media is a way to define people.

B．It's important to use social media healthily.

C．It is too difficult to live without social media.

D．Social media is great and he needs it all the time.

25．Which words can best describe Sivert?

A．Outgoing and friendly.　　B．Patient and caring.

C．Funny and proud.　　D．Brave and strong-willed.

26．What can we learn about Lorna from the passage?

A．She is a mother of a 16-year-old teenager.

B．She helped his son successfully stay off the social media.

C．She doesn't really agree with the "16 for 16 challenge" on the radio.

D．She is not against social media because her son succeeded in using it.

Everyone may feel angry at any time. It's a common feeling. Some people cry when they feel angry and some may shout. Unluckily, many of us have been used to hiding anger. A study suggests that this can have long-term bad influences on our health.

Is it better to cry or break things whenever something makes us angry? The study points out that when we show our anger in this way, we can't probably get on well with our friends or our family. The more time we keep being angry, the worse result we'll get. So how can we deal with our feeling of anger in a right way?

First, know what anger is. Anger is often caused by feelings of being too afraid, disappointment (失望) and so on.

Also, care more about those everyday things that will make us angry. For example, we may get angry in a long line at the store. Take a step back and think that it isn't personal. Everyone in the line has dinner to make, just like us. Then we'll feel better. Another way of dealing with anger is to talk about it. The study has shown that if we name our feelings, we can slowly calm ourselves down.

Besides, take a deep breath or find some helpful exercise to do. Exercise helps deal with anger.

Remember that how we act when we are angry can make things better or worse. If we learn to deal with anger, we will be happier and healthier.

Our grandchildren were visiting for the weekend, and they all loved ___37___. So I told my husband we needed some more for dinner.

He said he would get some. Then he asked our grandson, Donovan, to come with him 38___ he walked out of the door. When he realized Donovan wasn’t ___39___, he turned around and saw Donovan running towards the car.

“Where are you going, honey?” my husband asked.

“Aren’t we going to the ___40___?”

“No, we’re going to harvest (收获) potatoes from the garden,” my husband laughed.

“I didn’t know you ___41___ them, grandpa!” Donovan was surprised.

I watched out of the window as my husband showed our grandson how to slide the shovel(铁锹) and lift the plant. Seeing a big bunch (串) of beautiful red potatoes come up, Donovan was very ___42___.

Then my husband explained to him how ___43___ it was to grow potatoes in the right place. "You have to make sure that the soil is sandy and loose (松散的). That's ___44___ I grow mine on a hill."

Thus began the ___45___ our grandchildren would learn from our garden.

That was 14 years ago. Since then, the garden has been an amazing place where we have chances to ___46___ with our grandchildren. It has seen so much of our laughter and joy. We teach them some about science, nature, and survival from growing their own food. And so much more.

Our granddaughter, Clare, is graduating ___47___ college, majoring (专业) in Crop and Soil Science. She ___48___ remembers having fun working with her grandpa in the garden when she was a little child.

She said, "Gardening is more than just a hobby; it is one of the greatest ways to ___49___ you from stress, worries and other worldly troubles. When we plant seeds, we also build hope and trust in the future, and in life itself." That's exactly what we expect from our grandchildren.

We have a sign in our garden that ___50___: To Plant a Garden is to Believe in Tomorrow. Teaching our grandchildren today how to live their lives ___51___ means we believe in their tomorrows.

long	solve	and	park	in	before	be	creative	stand	minute

One way to solve a problem is to be creative. Creative thinking, many people often think, 52 just for artists and designers, but this is not true. Dr. Edward, an expert in creative thinking and problem solving, has shown that using creativity to 53 problems is very useful in business and in our communities, and will continue to be so in the future.

One example of creative thinking is the solution to a parking problem in a town center. In the areas close to stores, people can only park for 20 54. However, many people leave their cars there for 55 than 20 minutes. Dr. Edward's solution is to make a rule that all cars that are 56 in these areas must keep their headlights on. Of course, drivers will want to return to their cars 57 their car batteries (蓄电池) die.

To help people think more 58, Dr. Edward invents the "Six Thinking Hats" method. The method helps people think about a problem 59 different ways to find a solution. You just imagine there are six hats of different colors and each hat 60 for a different way of thinking. For example, the white hat helps people consider the facts 61 the black hat helps people consider why a possible solution may not work. So, next time you have a problem, use this method and see what ideas you have.
