Dolphins are smart animals. They have warm blood and feed their babies on breast milk(母乳), just like humans. The most interesting is, dolphins communicate like humans by calling each other by name. They live in the sea. But many of them have to live in ocean parks because of humans. Do they miss their home?

Edge Innovations, a US company, built a lifelike robotic dolphin. And the 550-pound machine has a real dolphin's moves and sounds. It can swim for up to 10 hours at once.

The CEO of Edge Innovations Walt Conti said, "There are about 3, 000 dolphins living in ocean parks around the world. They are showing their talents for visitors every day. And they help these parks make several billions of dollars. And it is possible for robotic dolphins to do the same thing and make as much money as real ones do. "

"The most important is, a lifelike dolphin can possibly take the place of a real dolphin. If there are more robotic dolphins, the real ones will be able to go back home," according to Daily Mail.

In fact, people around the world are trying to help dolphins in ocean parks. For example, ocean parks in France can no longer have dolphin shows.
