B

Whether it was nature or nurture (培养), I grew into a person who was a bit detached (冷漠的), which was good for a career in journalism but not for emotional availability or a joyous life. In truth, I was a practiced escape artist. If you revealed some defenseless intimacy to me, I was good at making meaningful eye contact with your shoes and then excusing myself to keep a vitally important appointment with my dry cleaner.

Life has a way of making you tender, though. I'm not an exceptional person, but I am a grower.

I have learned something profound along the way. Being openhearted is an essential requirement for being a full, kind and wise human being. But it's not enough. People need social skills: being curious about other people; disagreeing without poisoning relationships; revealing vulnerability (脆弱性) at an appropriate pace; being a good listener; knowing how to ask for and offer forgiveness; knowing how to host a gathering where everyone feels embraced; knowing how to see things from another's point of view.

In any collection of humans,there are diminishers and there are illuminators.Diminishers are so into themselves;they make others feel insignificant,They stereotype and label.If they learn one thing about you,they continue to make a series of assumptions about who you must be.

Illuminators,on the other hand,have a persistent curiosity about other people.They have been trained or have trained themselves in the craft of understanding others.They know how to ask
