Australia's Top Natural Attractions

In Australia, you'll find an incredible variety of jaw-dropping natural wonders.

The Three Sisters

Located in the Blue Mountains, the Three Sisters is a strikingly unusual rock formation that represents three sisters who were turned to stone according to Aboriginal legend. The tallest of the sisters stands at over 920m above sea level.

The Grampians

Where: Three-hour drive from Melbourne

The Grampians National Park is known for its amazing views, sandstone mountains, wild flowers, wildlife and the must-see Mackenzie Falls. Take the 2.5-hour return hike that ends in an incredible view of tree-covered mountains, blue lakes and wide valleys.

The Great Ocean Road

B

My name is Linda. I am from Isla de Maipo, Chile. I live with my dad, my mom and a rabbit happily. But I was born with a cleft lip (唇裂).

I don't remember anything about my first years with my cleft lip. All I know is that when I was young, my parents found Fundación Gantz in Santiago, where I had been for free treatment.

Every time when I went to Fundación Gantz, my heart was full of thanks to my parents. It was not easy to arrive on time for medical examination. We had to get up at six in the morning to drive for more than an hour and be careful not to get hit by other cars, but my parents never complained about such busy and tiring days.

Doctors at Fundación Gantz helped me a lot. First, they healed my cleft lip. Then, with orthodontic treatment (正畸治疗), they managed to correct my bite, and later they performed an operation on my jawbone.

I thank the doctors there who treated me, and Dr. Angus is my favorite — he has known me since I was born. When I was in the waiting room waiting for my operation on my jawbone, I was sweating all over in fear. Dr. Angus came to my side and talked to me endlessly about the things I was interested in, such as Kayros' music and Bolano's books, making me feel relaxed.

In the past, before the treatment, I had no confidence, and children made jokes on my cleft lip at school. I started training in Taekwondo (跆拳道) at the age of four in a gym next to my kindergarten and it was just what I needed at that time. It changed me and the children around me — before, children played tricks on me, but later they respected me. Today, when people talk about something on my lip, I will tell them the little mark never bothers me because it is so small that it can hardly be seen.

I want to tell the medical experts at Gantz to keep it up because their work is admirable, and they help a lot of people in need.

4 Which of the following can best describe the author's parents?

- A. Selfless. B. Impatient. C. Fair. D. Outgoing.

5. How did Dr. Angus help the author reduce her fear of the operation?

- A. He read to her. B. He talked about interesting things with her.
C. He played music for her. D. He changed her operation plan.

6. How did Taekwondo change the 4-year-old author?

- A. It made her school time colorful. B. It built her confidence.
C. It improved her school performances. D. It prepared her for her future career.

7. What does the underlined word "something" refer to in paragraph 6?

- A. The color. B. The cost. C. The operation. D. The mark.

C

The return of sports during the pandemic (大流行病) has been one of the fewest saviors for many people over the last year. It offers a sense of hope that, one day, things will return to some sort of normality.

The same is true in the world of esports (电子竞技), an industry that has played some of its biggest and most great games behind closed doors over the past 12 months.

René Romann is a huge fan of Team Liquid, a leading worldwide professional esports organization. “Following my favorite organization has provided relief during such difficult times. It’s interesting to see this online family, this Liquid family, and how we can help each other in certain situations, especially in this pandemic,” Romann told CNN Sport.

Studies show the number of esports fans rose rapidly and, with everyone stuck indoors due to the lockdown (封控), TV viewers increased again. “Keeping fans attracted is important for an organization like Team Liquid, which says its supporters are at the heart of everything it does,” Team Liquid’s CEO, Steve Arhancet, said. His team regularly sent handwritten letters and called fans over the phone in order to encourage that community feeling. It was something that he said had been extra important during such tough times.

“When you’re able to provide that kind of care and consideration for a family member or a friend or someone that you just care about, why is it different for a relationship between the sports team and its fans? It should be the same,” Arhancet told CNN Sport, “I think a lot of other teams take it for granted. They just assume that fans could just watch the content and that’s enough. It isn’t. Sports teams have to care, to listen and to remember.”

8. What does René Romann think of Team Liquid?

- A. It is rich. B. It is large. C. It is helpful. D. It is small.

9. What is the most important for an esports organization according to Arhancet?

- A. Its supporters. B. Its equipment. C. Its members’ skills. D. Its size.

10. How did Team Liquid give its fans a sense of community?

- A. By changing its game rules. B. By providing difficult contents.
C. By keeping in close contact with them. D. By helping look after their family members.

11. Which is the most suitable title for the text?

- A. How Team Liquid Became Professional
B. What Role Team Liquid Played in Esports
C. Why Sports Returned to Daily Life During Lockdown
D. How Team Liquid Made a Difference During the Pandemic

D

We always hear that texting, which refers to the communicative practice of sending brief messages on cell phones or other personal digital devices, is a disaster. The idea is that texting leads to the fall of writing ability among young people because it is full of informal language. As a matter of fact, it isn't true. In order to see that texting is actually a whole new way of writing that young people are developing, we have to look at what language really is.

Basically, if we think about language, it has existed(存在)for centuries, and it appears as speech. We talked. That's what we're probably genetically determined. That's how we use language most. Writing is something that came along much later. But writing has its advantage. When you write, you can make the content smooth, colorful and elegant with language, which is much less likely if you're just talking. It is because writing is a conscious(有意识的)process and you can look backwards.

Informal speech is something quite different. Linguists have actually shown that when we're speaking informally in an unmonitored way, we tend to speak in words 7 to 10 as a group. You'll notice this if you ever have an occasion for recording yourself or a group of people talking. That's what speech is like. Speech is much looser and less reflective(反思的)-very different from writing.

Texting is a new way of writing, because texters use writing skills before texting. People will process information in more creative uses of language during texting. When they use informal language in their texts, many understand there are different communicative situations. They try shortening language for correct spelling of a word or a phrase. Texting also allows texters much time to form their thoughts and provides many opportunities for them to revise their ideas. Moreover, texting positively exercises texters' rhetorical(修醇的)skills. Since texts are written in various styles, people must know how to match the style of a text with its message.

Now we have an overall understanding of texting.

12. How does writing differ from speech?

- | | |
|------------------------------|--|
| A. It came before talking. | B. It is an unconscious process. |
| C. Its style is less strict. | D. It can be improved again and again. |

13. What does the underlined word "looser" in paragraph 3 mean?

- | | | | |
|--------------|------------|-----------|------------|
| A. Stricter. | B. Richer. | C. Freer. | D. Harder. |
|--------------|------------|-----------|------------|

14. What is paragraph 4 mainly about?

- A. What is speech exactly.
B. How texters learn to write.
C. How texters send message successfully.

D. The relationship between writing and texting.

15. Which statement about texting does the author agree with?

A. It is another form of writing.

B. It is less reflective.

C. It is the same as speaking.

D. It is a disaster.

“Here I go!” shouted David while kicking my new ball. David lived next door and was older than me. I thought he was a wild child, but he was actually very kind. The ball went flying as if it were going to space. “That was high!” Kristy said in surprise and we went after the ball. We all had a great time.

Later we had supper and the food my aunt made was good. While Kristy was helping do the dishes, David and I ran outside to play. We started taking turns riding my bike. David suggested that we ride it to the forest. And I agreed. David and I got on the bike and David started riding fast.

As we rode through the forest, I felt the wind brushing my face. It felt so great and free. Suddenly the bike hit a fallen branch and we went flying off the bike. Lying on the ground, I felt dizzy (眩晕的). I checked myself for injuries and saw some but they didn’t upset me.

“David!” I shouted out anxiously.

“Hey,” said a voice. I turned my head and it was David, who was standing behind me, holding my broken bike. At the sight of my disabled bike, I was so sad that I couldn’t hold back my tears. It took David some time to calm me down.
