A

Beyond fresh snow and convenient access to the slopes, what makes the best ski town? For some, it's having access to fantastic restaurants, bars and shops. For others, it's about great accommodation options, a small-town vibe or a historic atmosphere. Here are some wonderful ski towns in North America you can't miss this year.

Mammoth Lakes, California.

A long ski season makes Mammoth Lakes especially appealing to skiers of all levels. Mammoth Lakes also offers plenty of options for off-mountain entertainment, whether you're looking to indulge in theater and the arts, shopping local or planning a spa day.

Banff, Alberta.

Walk 15 minutes in just about any direction from the town of Banff and you'll find yourself surrounded by the majestic wilderness of Banff National Park. The resort town and gateway to the surrounding park boasts a surprising number of shops, art galleries, bars and excellent restaurants for its size.

North Conway, New Hampshire.

Located within the scenic White Mountains of New Hampshire, North Conway sits within a half-hour drive of more than a dozen ski resorts. Off the slopes, visitors can explore the town's unique Victorian buildings with New England charm. The Mount Washington Observatory Weather Discovery Center makes for an excellent rest-day diversion.

Stowe, Vermont.

Steepled churches and clapboard houses make Stowe a typical New England ski town, complete with excellent options for all kinds of skiers. While there are plenty of fine dining establishments and luxury resorts catering to well-heeled travelers, there's a lively après scene as well, especially at The Matterhorn. Rest day activities can
