And during the night, showers will slowly move in from the Atlantic and reach southwest England by early morning. The rest of the country will have a very mild, dry night with temperatures no lower than 15 degrees in the south. A little cooler, 11 degrees or so in the north. And now, let's move on to the weather forecast for Friday and the weekend. Well, southern Europe will once again get the best of the weekend weather. Scotland and Northern Ireland will have heavy rain for much of the weekend and temperatures will drop to 17 degrees. Across most of England. The weather will be cloudy but mainly dry with sunny periods. And when the sun does come out, temperatures could rise up to 23 degrees.

W: Yes, and Mario was so lucky that he was found by them.

M: Definitely. He got into trouble while swimming in the sea. That's really dangerous. If he hadn't shouted for help, those two teens wouldn't have found him.

W: That's right. Fortunately, the boys were passing in their fishing boat. When they heard the shout, they pulled Mario into their boat and took him back to the beach.

M: That's really heart-warming. Mario was grateful to the boys. Mario spent the night in the hospital, but he's fine now. He's already talking about getting back into the water. That's brave.

W: I guess he doesn't let this scare him away from the ocean.

M: Yes. We'd better go now. Mr Johnson is coming. Don't be late for the class.
