II. 阅读理解 (共 40 分) 第一节阅读下列短文, 从下面每小题的 A、B、C、D 四个选项中选出最佳选项, 并在答题卷上将相应的字母编号涂黑。

2. (7.5 分) Body language is the most powerful language of all. It is said that our body movements communicate about 50 percent of what we really mean. And words only express 7 percent. Though your mouth is closed, your body is just saying.

Arms. How you hold your arms shows how you are. If you keep your arms to the sides of your body or behind your back, it shows you are not afraid. Outgoing people use their arms with big movements, while quieter people keep them close to their bodies. If someone upsets you, just cross your arms to show you're unhappy!

Head. When you want to appear confident, keep your head up. If you are a monitor in class, you can also keep your head up when you want your words to be taken seriously.

Legs. Your legs are likely to move around a lot more than usual when you are nervous or telling lies. If you are at interviews, try to keep them still!

Posture (姿势). A good posture makes you feel better about yourself. If you are feeling down, you usually don't sit straight, but sit with your shoulders inward (向内的). This makes breathing more difficult, which can make you feel nervous or uncomfortable.

Mouth. When you are thinking, you often purse your lips (噘嘴). You might also use this body movement to hold back an angry opinion that you don't wish to show. However, it will probably still be noticed, and people will know you're not happy.

(1) When someone is keeping his arms behind his back, it shows that he is _____.

A. angry                      B. outgoing                      C. cool                      D. unafraid

(2) If you want to seem confident, you should _____.

A. move your head less                      B. move your arms a lot
C. raise your head                      D. cross your arms

(3) Which of the following movements tells someone is nervous? _____

A. Moving the legs around a lot more than usual.
B. Pursing the lips and covering the mouth.
C. Keeping the arms to the sides of the body.
D. Sitting straight with the shoulders outward.
