Horses, cats, rabbits, pigs, ducks, and dogs are all animals. They have different names and different appearances. For example, a horse is a large, furry animal that likes to sleep and graze. Rabbits are also furry, but they have long ears and like to hop around. Pigs are pink and have curly tails.

When counting we use numbers. Eleven, twelve, thirteen, and fifteen are all numbers. Twenty is also a number and it means there are 20 things. If someone asks "how many?" they want to know the number of things there are.

If someone asks "Are they ducks?" and the answer is "No they aren't," it means that the animals are not ducks. In some cases they could be any other animal.

Someone who is quiet means they don't talk very much. But if someone is active means they move around a lot and have a lot of energy. If someone is strict it means they have rules and expect people to follow them. But if someone is kind it means they are friendly and helpful.

The days of the week are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. We have different activities on different days. For example we might do homework on Monday, watch TV on Wednesday, and have a picnic on Sunday.
