阅读短文，从每小题所给的四个选项中，选出最佳选项，填入空白处。

Our art teacher George was leaving soon for his country. I was preparing a special 1 for him. It was a hand-drawn picture book about our school. I worked a long time, trying to make each picture as 2 as possible.

One day, I was drawing while my little sister Becky was watching with great 3. Just then, my classmate Jeff dropped by.

“Hi! Peter, want to play basketball in the yard?” he asked.

“I'd like to, 4 it's too cold outside!” I replied.

“Exactly!” he said. “It's the perfect weather for not getting too hot.”

That's a cool thing about Jeff. He always looks on the 5 side of almost everything.

“Let's go!” We went out, leaving the drawings on the table.

We laughed as we returned. When I 6 the door, my heart nearly stopped. Right there, Becky was coloring my pictures.

“7, Becky!” I rushed to her, but it was too late. Almost every page was colored.

“What did you do?” I shouted 8.

“I just wanted to help.” Sho began to cry.

“My drawings are gone forever!” I felt frustrated(懊恼的) and ___9___ Joff for help.

“Unless...” said Jeff.

“Unless what?” I asked.

“Remember the jigsaw puzzle (拼图)? Wo can cr eato something new from these messy pictures.” Jeft ___10___.

“Can we make it?” I doubted.

“I’m not sure, but we can have a ___11___.” He encouraged.

First, we cut the drawings into shapes, such as our brown teaching buildings, green playground and so on. Then, we ___12___ all these pieces together and made a jigsaw, Finally, we even added more paints. Days later, a beautiful “___13___” appeared in front of us.

There was a ___14___ ending.

“Thanks, guys,” Georgo smiled, “I love it so much. It will give me many great___15___ here.”

So, you see, there lies a beam (束) of light behind every dark cloud. Jeff’s way of dealing with things did help.

The Smiths woke up earlier than usual. There was something about hiking (远足) that made them feel wide awake and excited to start the day as their eyes were open.

The family had a simple breakfast. They discussed the plan for the day at table. "Dad and I looked at a map last night," said Mrs. Smith. "We found a nearby trail (小径). There are many interesting things along the way, and best of all, there will be a surprise at the end of the trail."

"What kind of surprise?" asked Jenny.

"It won't be a surprise if we tell you," laughed her mom. "The sooner you get ready to go, the sooner you'll find out."

They set out for hiking soon. It was a good day for seeing wildlife. Along the trail, the trees were filled with kinds of birds flying around. Hearing a noise in the grass, they stopped and saw two rabbits crossing the trail. After a while, Mike noticed several monkeys in the trees and Mr. Smith took photos before they ran away.

Then, they continued their hiking. Jenny and Mike were discussing what kind of snake they had just seen on the way. At this moment, they came to an open area with some small pools. The kids' eyes grew wide. They looked at their parents.

"Is this the surprise?" asked Mike in excitement.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith smiled as they walked over to one of the small pools. Steam (蒸汽) rose into the air. "They're hot springs (温泉)," explained Mr. Smith. "The heat is produced from inside Earth."

"Could we have a bath (洗澡) in the spring if we have our bathing suits?" asked Jenny. Mrs. Smith nodded. "Your bathing suits are in the bag." She laughed, putting her feet into the spring water.

"I can't believe it! Mom and Dad. This is a great surprise." Jumped Jenny.

So far, China has successfully sent a large number of satellites (卫星) and spaceships into space. Space scientists have been greatly inspired (赋予灵感) by the old stories and ancient famous people when giving them names.

Since thousands of years ago, Chinese people have dreamed of going to the moon. Chang'e Flies to the Moon is one of the most popular stories. As you can see, China's first man-made satellite to circle around the moon was named Chang'e I. More interestingly, the moon rover (巡视器) was named after the Jade Rabbit, who is the partner of Chang'e in the story. These old stories carry people's best wishes and dreams. With the development of science and technology, our scientists have made them come true.

Kua Fu Runs After the Sun is another story to show how much ancient Chinese people wanted to know about the unknown world. Now, Kua Fu is going with the scientists to “visit” the sun, because we have a space project called KuaFu Mission.

Besides the ancient stories, space scientists also get ideas from ancient famous people. For example, Mozi, an ancient scientist, discovered that light travels in a straight line over 2,000 years ago. His discovery made space study take a big step at that time. So, China's first quantum (量子) science s atellite was named Mozi , making China the first country in the world to achieve quantum communication between satellites and the ground.

From such simple things as giving names to the satellites, we can see how great our traditional culture is and what influence it has on our modern science and technology.

26. In China, space scientists get ideas from _____ when naming satellites.

- ①old stories ②traditional projects ③ancient famous people ④ popular inventions
 A. ①② B. ①③ C. ②④ D. ③④

27. What do we know about Chang'e I according to the passage?

- A. It moves around the moon. B. It protects the Jade Rabbit.
 C. It “visits” the sun with the scientists. D. It is the world’s first man-made satellite.

28. How does the writer support his opinion in Paragraph 4?

- A. By listing numbers. B. By comparing facts.
 C. By giving an example. D. By reporting a result.

29. Which is the right structure of the passage?

(①=Paragraph 1

②=Paragraph 2, ...)

30. What’s the writer’s main purpose of writing the passage?

- A. To spread the traditional Chinese culture.
 B. To explain how our scientists develop the space industry.
 C. To introduce the achievements in our science and technology.
 D. To tell how traditional Chinese culture influences our space science.

第一节 任务型阅读(共 5 小题, 每小题 2 分, 满分 10 分)

阅读短文, 用英文填空或回答问题。(注意每小题的词数要求)

Born in a small village, I saw how busy farmers were in spring, and what the season meant to them. Spring is a time when the land wakes up from its long sleep, and the fields are ready for crops (庄稼). If you are lazy in spring, you will get nothing in autumn. So, farmers seem to compete with time in spring.

When I was a little girl, every weekend I was busy planting crops. Whatever it was, I had fun and learned a lot. For example, when we planted potatoes, we needed to cut the sprouted (发芽的) potatoes into pieces and made sure every piece of “seed” (种子) had one or two sprouts. It was really like a math game.

Farm work is also teamwork. That’s why every spring field is busy with people of all ages working in it. While planting beans, my father dug small holes, and I carefully put some seeds into each hole. The work was hard and boring, but when we worked together, it seemed easier and more interesting.

I felt magic of life in spring as well. In a few weeks, the seeds sprouted, encouraging us to care for them by watering and so on. As time went by, they grew into healthy plants.

Because of these wonderful childhood experiences, I hold such a special feeling for spring.

46. _____, is the best season to plant crops. (仅填 1 词)

47. If you don’t work/hard in spring, you will _____ (不超过 5 词)

48 & 49. Fill in the blanks according to the passage.

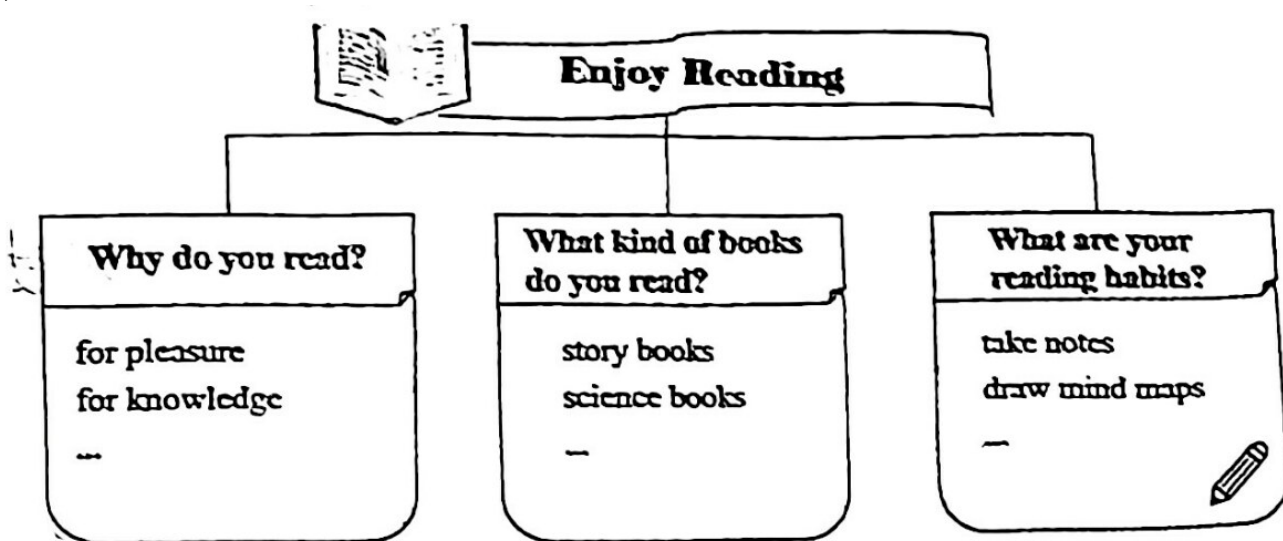

Spring Planting
Ideas or Feelings	Farm work
I had fun and learned a lot.	planting potatoes
Farm work is also teamwork.	_____ (不超过 5 词)
