In the morning, the three of us went to Qinglong mountain to visit the tomb. Once there, the mountains are full of grave sweepers. Some of them have wreaths, some have flower baskets, and a group of primary school students have a small white flower hanging on their chest. I watched them lay flower baskets and wreaths under the monument. The primary school students hung small white flowers on the railing one after another, and there were still three minutes of silence to the martyrs.
