听力原文:

Text 1

M: Excuse me, is anybody sitting here?

W: No...no, here, let me move my purse from the chair.

M: Oh, thank you.

Text 2

W: Hello, Sam, another weekend is coming. What are you going to do on Saturday evening?

M: I'm not sure. Any idea?

W: Try the game Counter Strike. It is very fascinating.

M: Oh, really? I'll try it. But I'm afraid it will do harm to my eyes after looking at the screen for a long time.

Text 3

W: Dana had a little accident last week in her new car.

M: Really? Was anybody hurt? Was there much damage?

W: No, it was really a small accident and everybody was fine. It was the other driver's fault.

Text 4

M: I have a surprising news for you.

W: What's it?

M: Barbara is getting married.

W: Who's the lucky guy?

M: Jason. He proposed last night at the formal dance.

Text 5

W: Nowadays English-speaking countries are no longer the only destinations for Chinese who want to study abroad.

M: You're right. An increasing number of Chinese students have applied to non-English countries like Germany, for example.

Text 6

M: Excuse me. Could you tell me how to get to the library?

W: Yes, sure. Just go straight ahead, and when you get to the gym, you'll see a four-story building next to it. That's the library.

M: Thanks. I think I can find it. By the way, is there a place around here where I can get a quick bite?

W: Well, there's an American-style fast food restaurant across the street from school.

M: Thanks. But I'd really prefer Chinese food.

W: Well, there's a noodle shop right behind the fast food restaurant.

M: OK. Thanks for your help.

W: My pleasure. Take care.

Text 7

W: Hi, Mike, you look tired. What's up?

M: Professor Lin asked me to carry the overhead projector from the AV Room to the classroom. So I carried it from the basement to the fifth floor.

W: Why didn't you take the elevator?

M: I was going to, but I saw a sign that said, "For teachers and handicapped only."

W: Since you were carrying something heavy, I think you could use the elevator.

M: Don't worry about it; I'll live. By the way, how were your classes today?

W: Super. We surfed online in our Geography class.

M: Sounds great. Modern advances definitely have changed education for the better.

W: Oh, yes. I've been told that there is a multimedia classroom on the third floor.

M: It's hard to imagine what school will be like in the future.

Text 8

M: Alice, where did you meet those guys we were talking with last night at Pizza Hut?

W: Oh, you mean John and Eric? Once I climbed Jade Mountain with the students in the Mountain Climbing Club, and I met them there. They are very interesting.

M: Yes. How about that American guy?

W: I'd never met him before. Eric told me that he's his new roommate this year.

M: It seemed that you and Eric are very good friends.

W: I guess you may say so. After coming back from Jade Mountain, we dated several times. We had a great time together, but we aren't going steady or anything like that.

M: Why not? He's kind of handsome and intelligent.

W: He's a lot of fun to be with, but we can't talk about anything heavy.

M: I know exactly what you mean. How about the other guy, John?

W: I don't really know him very well. He seems to be pretty quiet and shy. Why do you ask?

M: Because I sat with him on the bus on our way home last night. I was very impressed by his sense of humor.

Text 9

M: Do you have any plans for the vacation?

W: In fact, I've got too many plans and I can't make up my mind.

M: Well, maybe I can help. What are your plans?

W: OK, listen. Plan A—I go back to the States and spend some time with my parents, and also visit my old friends. I miss them a lot. Plan B—Travel around nearby countries like Thailand, Japan, Malaysia...

M: Wait, wait, and wait! How much money do you plan to spend on your Big Adventure? Be realistic! We don't make much money ourselves.

W: You're right. My parents will send me the money, if I beg. But I'm really too old now to ask them for any money, except in an emergency.

M: Then, what's your Plan C?

W: Well! My Plan C is top-secret. I can't tell you now.

M: OK. You don't have to tell me your top-secret. But maybe you can spend some time with me in my hometown.

W: You're so kind. Actually, visiting you in your hometown is part of my Plan C.

M: After your stay in my hometown, we can visit Zhang Hua together.

W: Then the three of us can visit Li Ming, right? It's very much like my Plan C.

M: Let's discuss this idea with Zhang Hua and Li Ming together tonight. Wow! It sounds like we're going to have a wonderful vacation.

When a British couple recently sold their beloved house, they believed they had tied everything up, and had been busy working to make sure the new owners could live in a house which was in a good condition before the sale. Repairs had been made and the paperwork had all been in order before they removed their belongings from the home where they had lived in the last 32 years or so.

A few weeks after they finished the sale, James and Clarrisa Munford discovered a box of treasures, which the former owners had hidden and forgotten all about—30 gold and silver coins. Legally, the coins—which were valued as much as ten thousand pounds—were now the Munfords' property, and they were well within their rights to quietly sell them and pocket the profits.

However, the Munfords, who own a business in London, immediately chose to get in touch with the sellers and return the coins, which had been left inside a built-in drawer in the home. “There is an old saying: ‘You harvest what you plant.’ ” said the original owner later, who didn't believe his ears when receiving Mr Munford's call.

. “My wife and I spent a great deal of time and effort to ensure that we left our home in excellent conditions for the Munfords, and our kindness was certainly returned by another! ” They wanted to give the Munfords some coins but they refused politely.

The sellers of the house were unwilling to be named, but said they wanted to share this story online to bring hope and inspiration to other people during these difficult times. “Now it is a good time to pause and reflect about how we treat each other. If there were more people like the Munfords, this world would be a much better place to live in.” he said.
