

2010-2023 历年浙江省温州中学高二上学期 期中英语试卷（带解析）

第 1 卷

一. 参考题库(共 25 题)

1. 阅读下列信息，并按照要求匹配信息。请在答题卡上将对应题号的相应选项字母涂黑。

A. When I take notes I always rewrite them. I also add things as I go, especially from the readings that I feel are important. This helps me remember things better and as I look things up in the text and add notes, it brings a deeper understanding of the material.

B. When I have to learn a new word, I write down the word and its meaning in the back of my notebook. Then I make sure to use the word at least 7 times in the next week. I put a check next to the word each time I use it to be sure. This way I can remember that word better.

C. I sit in the front of the classroom. That way there are no distractions between me and the teacher and I can focus my attention on the class. The further back you sit, the more kids there are in front of you who can distract you.

D. I watch my teachers carefully to find what's the most important. Some start moving around a lot, some raise their voice, and some start moving their hands about. When this happens, I write down what they're saying in my notebook.

E. Here are some tips on how to create a good study environment: Find a place to study and keep it for study only. Equip the environment with all study needs. Control the noise level at acceptable levels. Avoid relaxing while working.

F. When I work on math problems, I write each step as I do it. This makes me think carefully about what I am doing. If the answer doesn't seem right, I can go back through the steps I wrote to see where I went wrong.

阅读下列学习方面的问题，并与上面的经验相匹配。

【小题 1】 I love learning new words, but I'm confused about how to remember them well. Whenever I meet a new word, I look it up in the dictionary for its meaning and write it down. However, a few days later, I'll forget what the word means. It's really a headache.

【小题 2】 I can't concentrate on what the teacher says in class. I sit at the back of the classroom. What the students in the front row do always attracts my attention. I'm wondering if anyone else has the same problem.

【小题 3】 It's impossible to write down everything the teacher says in my notebook. I have been told to take down the important points, but how can I tell which points are important?

【小题 4】 I take good notes in class. I'm curious to know how to make good use of these notes to improve my understanding. I'm often confused about how to deal with the notes.

【小题 5】 I enjoy studying at home at night or over the weekend. But sometimes I just can't focus. I think it's the study environment that makes me not feel like studying. Who can tell me how to improve the study environment?

2.四、单词拼写 (共 6 小题 ; 每小题 1 分, 满分 6)

【小题 1】 Even a small success gives one a sense of a _____.

【小题 2】 The woman is respected by people for s _____ against cancer bravely for years.

【小题 3】 She opened the door quietly so as not to d _____ the sleeping baby.

【小题 4】 No matter how hard he tired, he found it was hard to s _____ his boss.

【小题 5】 As we all know, Zhao Benshan and Xiao Shenyang are popular comedy _____ (表演者)

【小题 6】 The New Year is a _____. People are all busy buying presents for their family and friends.

3. With electricity _____ because of the road repairs, the whole building was completely dark.

- A. cut up
- B. cut off

- C. cut out
- D. cut down

4.增加：在缺词处加一个漏字符号（∧），并在其下面写上该加的词。

删除：把多余的词用斜线（\）划掉。

修改：在错的词下划一横线，并在该词下面写上修改后的词。

注意：1. 每处错误及其修改均仅限一词；

2. 只允许修改 10 处，多者（从第 11 处起）不计分。

It was Sunday yesterday. But Sally and I decided to visit the Xi'an Zoo, where is only four kilometres from our school. At nine in the morning, we waited the bus at the bus stop. After 15 minutes or so, we got on the No. 10 bus excited. On arrival, we find the zoo crowding with people, students, workers, villagers and so on. Most of them was young parents with his children. There were many kinds of animals in the zoo. They were elephants, bears, lions, monkeys and the beautiful birds. Children liked the monkeys very much. At 12 o'clock, we returned back home. What good time we had at the zoo!

5. With the pressure _____, she was off work for weeks because she couldn't stand it any more.

- A. picking up
- B. making up
- C. building up
- D. putting up

6. My mind seems always to return to the day when I met Carl. The city bus stopped at a corner to pick up the daily commuters (someone who travels regularly to and from work), a group in which I was included. Boarding the bus, I looked for a place to sit. At last, I found a place near the back.

The man in the seat next to the one I was going for was an older man in a grey suit, well-worn dress shoes, and a black hat like I always pictured reporters wearing, but without the little press card. Seated, I began to read the book I had been carrying, which was Jack Kerouac's On the Road. The man in the seat next to me introduced himself by asking if I had read any other book like the one I was holding. When I told him I had, he seemed to become interested, and so did I. He introduced himself as Carl and asked if I liked jazz, and I told him that I didn't really listen to it, and that I liked rock and roll. Waiting for Carl to tell me that I should listen to real music, I was shocked when he just smiled and nodded. He said, "You remind me of myself when I was your age. I remember how my parents hated jazz and how they couldn't see how I could listen to that awful noise. I bet your parents say the same thing, don't they?" Now it was my turn to smile, amused with how right he was.

As the bus carried us from one side of the city to the other, Carl and I talked about a lot of different things. The more we talked, the more amazed I became at how much the two of us really had in common, despite the age difference. I haven't seen him since we parted, but the thought of our connection that day rarely leaves my mind.

Carl really made me think about how much we can learn from each other if we just break through the blocks between us we've got. I mean, I would have never thought before that day that I could have anything in common with someone so much older than I. But Carl taught me that no matter what we are, we are all just people, and that we should make an extra effort to try and get to know our neighbors and people we see every day, regardless of age, race, religion, sex, or anything else. If we all take the time to attempt to understand each other, I think that the world would be a much better place that we could share together, as humans.

【小题 1】 From the first paragraph we know that the author _____.

- A. did not mind whether there was a seat or not
- B. hoped to have a seat when getting on the bus
- C. thought the bus was overcrowded
- D. looked for a seat but failed

【小题 2】 The author usually imagined a reporter as one who _____.

- A. liked jazz music
- B. enjoyed talking with others
- C. liked reading Jack Kerouac's works
- D. usually wore a black hat and press card

【小题 3】 After talking with Carl, the author realized that _____.

- A. older people were nice to talk to
- B. he should have known Carl earlier
- C. his parents were so different from Carl in listening to music
- D. age was not necessarily a problem in heart-to-heart communication

【小题 4】 It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

- A. the author hasn't seen the old man since then
- B. jazz music used to be more popular than rock and roll
- C. the author was not satisfied with human relationships in the world
- D. Carl made the author realize we humans live in peace and brotherhood

7.--- It was _____ for man to work in the forest, especially for a woman, like Jane Goodle.

--- Yes, I can't agree more. It is said that only after her mother came to help her _____ focus on her project.

- A. abnormal, was she able to
- B. uncommon, she was able to
- C. unusual, was she able to

D. extraordinary, she was able to 8.--- My son is learning English. What dictionary shall I buy for him?

--- What about this one? It is _____ for beginners.

- A. intended
- B. operated
- C. offered
- D. delivered

9.--- Is the situation there any better?

--- On the contrary, it is _____ now.

- A. badly off
- B. worse off
- C. well off
- D. better off

10.I _____ an old photo while _____ my album, which reminded me of my happy childhood.

- A. came across, looking through
- B. came about, looking up
- C. came along, looking down upon
- D. came up with, looking into

11.--- You did very well at the meeting, Black.

--- Well, I regret _____ that to the boss.

- A. say
- B. to say
- C. said
- D. saying

12.One third of our school _____ covered by trees, while the majority of our students _____ girls.

- A. is, is
- B. are; are
- C. is; are
- D. are; is

13.It was so cold that he had the fire _____ all night long.

- A. to burn
- B. burn
- C. burning
- D. burned

14. Not _____ openly may make one's point confusing, while careless words are _____ to hurt others' feelings.

- A. to speak, possible
- B. speak, probable
- C. speaking, likely
- D. spoken, sure

15. 根据以下要点，写一篇介绍美国残疾女作家海伦·凯勒（Helen Keller）的短文。

。

参考词汇：the deaf-mute 聋哑人

要点：

生于美国

19个月 因病丧失视力、听力以及语言能力

7岁 遇上女教师 Miss Sullivan, 在其帮助下学会了读、写、说

24岁 以优异成绩毕业于 Radcliffe College

著作 The Story of My life, Let Us have Faith

贡献 倾毕生精力为全世界的盲人和聋哑人服务

字数：120左右

16. Young children seem to master computer games _____. And playing computer games will always make them feel _____.

- A. easily, easily
- B. with ease, at ease
- C. easy, easy
- D. at ease, with ease

17. A couple of years ago, I decided it was time to take a break. I was about to ____, and I wanted to reward myself for all those college years.

As I was curiously ____ different websites and guidebooks, getting ready for my little adventure, I ____ that besides getting all the necessities, I also needed to get a sun ____.

When I got to the shop, it ____ occurred to me that in the middle of planning my ____, I somehow hadn't paid much attention to the calendar. It was Feb. 14, and Valentine's fever had ____ the whole shopping center.

I finally ____ a rack(货架) with summer hats hanging on it. I walked over and tried on a couple. I really liked one ____ . I just couldn't decide whether I wanted to get the one with a pink ribbon or a blue ribbon ____ decoratively around it.

"You looked really great on those hats," a middle-aged man ____ there waiting to be helped... and said to me.

“Oh, thank you.” I ___ answered and increased my pace. I was in no mood to have a ___ with a stranger. I stopped by a sale rack and looked through colorful shirts. “Excuse me.” A voice suddenly ___ my dreamy state of mind. I turned around and that man was standing right behind me. He looked ___ but determined. Before I could do or say anything, he continued with what he wanted to say. “I’m sorry to ___ you, but those hats looked really nice on you. You see, I don’t ___ anybody to buy a Valentine’s gift for this year, so I got you one of the hats. I ___ you don’t mind.” he said while handing me a plastic bag and disappeared immediately. “Thank you!” I finally breathed out, feeling quite surprised. Who would imagine that a ___ would walk up to you and give you a present? I do hope the man found his Valentine ___. And most of all--I no longer feel blue on Valentine’s Day, even when I’m alone, because I remember my hat story.

【小题 1】

- A. retire
- B. speak
- C. defeat
- D. graduate

【小题 2】

- A. searching
- B. searching for
- C. looking
- D. looking for

【小题 3】

- A. announced
- B. suggested
- C. realized
- D. declared

【小题 4】

- A. hat
- B. glass
- C. shirt
- D. bag

【小题 5】

- A. proudly
- B. suddenly

- C. curiously
- D. patiently

【小题 6】

- A. study
- B. reward
- C. trip
- D. present

【小题 7】

- A. handed over
- B. taken over
- C. given out
- D. turned out

【小题 8】

- A. bought
- B. made
- C. kept
- D. saw

【小题 9】

- A. on business
- B. in particular
- C. at work
- D. in danger

【小题 10】

- A. formed
- B. tied
- C. collected
- D. torn

【小题 11】

- A. lying
- B. stopping
- C. standing
- D. following

【小题 12】

- A. angrily
- B. politely
- C. unhappily
- D. sadly

【小题 13】

- A. bargain
- B. trade
- C. cooperation
- D. conversation

【小题 14】

- A. continued
- B. interested
- C. attracted
- D. interrupted

【小题 15】

- A. tired
- B. shy
- C. surprised
- D. sorry

【小题 16】

- A. bother
- B. satisfy
- C. meet
- D. fit

【小题 17】

- A. catch
- B. ask
- C. have
- D. advise

【小题 18】

- A. think
- B. consider
- C. find
- D. hope

【小题 19】

- A. lover
- B. patient
- C. teacher
- D. stranger

【小题 20】

- A. in time
- B. on time
- C. at times
- D. over time

18.--- What do you suppose made her worried?

--- _____ a new cell phone.

- A. Lose
- B. Lost
- C. Losing
- D. Because of losing

19. People in China don't like hugging each other when meeting, which _____ a common _____ in some European countries.

- A. are, practice
- B. is; exercise
- C. are; exercise
- D. is; practice

20. Bobby Moresco grew up in New York's Hell's Kitchen, a poor working-class neighborhood on Manhattan's West Side. But Hell's Kitchen lies right next door to Broadway, and the bright lights attracted Bobby from the time he was a teen. Being stage-struck was hardly what a street kid could admit to his partners. Fearing their making fun of him, he told no one, not even his girlfriend, when he started taking acting lessons at age 17. If you were a kid from the neighborhood, you became a cop, construction worker, longshoreman or criminal. Not an actor.

Moresco struggled to make that long walk a few blocks east. He studied acting, turned out for all the cattle calls (试戏通告)-- and during the decade of the 1970s made a total of $2,000. “I wasn’t a good actor, but I had a driving need to do something different with my life,” he says.

He moved to Hollywood, where he drove a cab and worked as a waiter. “ My father said, 'Stop this craziness and get a job; you have a wife and daughter.' ”But Moresco kept working at his chosen career.

Then in 1983 his younger brother Thomas was murdered in a killing. Moresco moved back to his old neighborhood and started writing as a way to explore the pain of Hell’s Kitchen. Half-Deserted Streets, based on his brother’s killing, opened at a small Off-Broadway theater in 1988. A Hollywood producer saw it and asked him to work on a screenplay.

His reputation grew, and he got enough assignments to move back to Hollywood. By 2003, he was again out of work and out of cash when he got a call from Paul Haggis, a director who had befriended him. Haggis wanted help writing a film about the country after September 11. The two worked on the writing Crash, but every studio in town turned it down. They kept trying. Studio executives, however, thought no one wanted to see hard lives in modern America.

Crash slipped into the theaters in May 2005, and quietly became both a hit and a critical success. It was nominated for six Academy Awards and won three -- Best Picture, Best Film Editing and Best Writing (Original Screenplay) by Paul Haggis and the kid from Hell’s Kitchen.

At age 54, Bobby Moresco became an overnight success. “If you have something you want to do in life, don’t think about the problems,” he says, “think about other ways to get it done.”

【小題 1】 Why Bobby Moresco did not tell anyone that he started taking lessons at age 17?

- A. He wanted to give his girlfriend a surprise.
- B. His girlfriend did not allow him to do this.
- C. He was afraid of being laughed at.
- D. He had no talent for acting.

【小題 2】 Which of the following sentences is NOT true?

- A. His father did not support his work as a bartender.
- B. Before he became an overnight success, his life experienced ups and downs.
- C. His brother’s death inspired his writing Half-Deserted Streets.
- D. Moresco grew up in New York’s Hell’s Kitchen which is a few blocks east of Broadway.

【小題 3】 The Studio executives turned the script Crash down because

-
- A. they thought the script would not be popular.
 - B. the script was not well written.
 - C. they had no money to make the film based on the script.
 - D. they thought Moresco was not famous.

【小題 4】 Which of the following can best describe Bobby Moresco?

- A. ambitious and persistent
- B. shy but hardworking
- C. caring and brave
- D. considerate and modest

21. The fourth round of heavy smog to hit Beijing in four weeks has sent more people to the hospital with respiratory (呼吸的) illnesses and led to calls for laws to control the pollution.

Pan Shiyi, a celebrity, said he is planning to propose a Clean Air Act to the local government. As a representative to the Beijing Municipal People's Congress, he started an online survey at 9:20 a.m. Within three hours, more than 25,000 web users, or 99 percent of total respondents (应答者), welcomed his proposal.

They have good reasons to stand alongside Pan. The latest round of haze (雾霾) reduced visibility to under 500 meters in many parts of the city. The smog has also led to a great increase in respiratory illnesses, particularly among children and the elderly. Anxious parents and doctors almost all blame the smoggy air for the illnesses. Though most schoolchildren are home for the winter holidays, the bad air can easily move indoors. Besides, ordinary medical masks fail to provide enough protection, so some people have turned to gas masks.

The causes of the frightening smog are rather mysterious, though experts blame too much emissions (排放) and the mountains around Beijing that trap pollution in winter, unless there is enough wind to clear it away. Some critics blamed China's top two oil firms, China National Petroleum Corp and China Petrochemical Corporation, saying the companies' outdated production technologies produce large quantities of high-polluting gas fuel. [来源: 学科网]

Meanwhile, some Beijingers have moved their brainstorming discussion to computers. If Pan's proposal for a Clean Air Act is adopted, netizens say the new law should include items providing for "car-free days" in times of smog, higher standards for vehicle fuel, stricter limit to industrial and engine gas emissions, and more effective protection for the public.

Beijing is not the only city that has ever lost the blue sky. Five days of thick fog caused thousands of deaths in Britain in December 1952, urging the government to pass the first Clean Air Act in 1956, which introduced smokeless zones and cleaner fuels to reduce pollution. That may provide some experience for Beijing to refer to.

【小題 1】 Why did Pan Shiyi started an online survey?

- A. To know the public's opinions on pollution
- B. To tell people the danger of the smoggy weather
- C. To call on people to support his proposal

D. To collect supporting evidence for his proposal

以上内容仅为本文档的试下载部分，为可阅读页数的一半内容。

如要下载或阅读全文，请访问：

<https://d.book118.com/688073141073007027>