Conor Grennan was unwilling to be a volunteer. The 29-year-old American was not sure if he had the skills or a strong feeling for it.

However, he went to work at an orphanage (孤儿院) in Nepal. His first thought was to make people impressed.

"I thought that if I volunteered just once, I could retell the story over and over," Grennan said in the Huffington Post.

However, his three-month stay in the orphanage turned into an unusual experience. It was in 2018 and Grennan had given up his job to begin a year's long around-the-world trip. His first three months were spent in Nepal.

When he arrived in the village, he knew nothing about the children or the local culture. When he opened the gate of the Little Princes Children's Home, he was faced by the excited children.

The young American ended up caring for 18 children. He later discovered that they were trafficked (被拐卖的) children. So he walked through the mountains with great difficulty to find the kids' families. "I started walking with photos of the kids," he told the Reuter's reporter. "I would show up in villages and show photographs around. I went with 24 photos, and I found 24 families. "

At the same time, he put his heart into Nepalese culture.

Grennan said, "Volunteering is the single best way to see how the rest of the world lives. "

He also encouraged others to do what he had done. He believes that volunteering needs only making decisions to show up.

Grennan's fight against child-trafficking has changed him. His book, Little Prince, came out last week.

I have a friend named Monty Roberts who owns a horse ranch(牧马场). The last time I was there he told me his story. When he was young, his family was too poor to have a house to live in. As a result , when he was in high school, all the students were asked to write a paper about what they wanted to be and do when they grew up. That night he wrote a seven-page paper describing his goal of owning a horse ranch. He also drew a picture to show a 4,000-square-foot house that would sit on a beautiful farm. The next day he handed it in to his teacher. Two days later he received his paper back. On the front page was a large red F. Roberts asked, "Why did I receive an F?" He teacher said, "This is an unrealistic dream for a young boy like you. Owning a horse ranch requires a lot of money. " Then the teacher added, "If you will rewrite this paper with a more realistic goal, I will reconsider your grade. "

The boy went home and thought about it for a long and hard time. He asked his father what he should do. His father said, " Look, son, you have to make up your own mind on this. However, I think it is a very important decision for you. "Finally, after sitting with it for a week, the boy turned in the same paper, making no changes at all. He told his teacher "you could keep the F and I still keep my dream".

He tells me this story because I am sitting in his 4,000-square-foot house in the middle of the 200-acre horse ranch. "I still have that school paper now. " He added, "The best part of the story is that two years ago that teacher brought 30 kids to camp out on my ranch for a week. " When the teacher was leaving, he said, Look, Monty, I can tell you this now. When I was your teacher, I was something of a dream stealer. During those years I stole a lot of kids'dreams. Luckily, you had enough gumption not to give up on yours. . "
