Step1: Greetings & short report Talk about the week in school. What news / story / book / movie ... have u got ?
Step2: Warming up—Oversea cultures (海外文化) 你知道什么是典型的哥特式建筑吗 Many diversified characteristics will help identify a structure as Gothic: ogee archways, ribbed vaults, and the wonderful flying buttresses are a few. Yet, it is always the craft placed high above, which captures our eyes and imaginations most effectively. Since all works of religious art rise beyond mere artistic expression, bearing wonderful symbolic reference, we must accept that our attention was intended to be focused upwards. Within the span of the passing centuries, the cathedrals of the Middle Ages themselves rise up above other cultural achievements. At the center of these brilliant legacies resides Notre Dame de Paris. (哥特式建筑带着浓重的宗教色彩，这使她超越了单纯的艺术表现，也比中世纪其他文化成就更让人叹为观止。她有高耸入云的尖塔，棱纹拱顶；她大多是教堂；她的代表作品就是我们熟知的巴黎圣母院.....) Wax printing is a kind of ancient traditional craft. Artists of wax printing make great efforts to explore new techniques and raise the wax printing art to a higher level. Therefore, it stands in the forefront of art with an entirely new look.

Wax printing, which is known as the first printing in the East, is the most ancient handicraft in China. More than two thousand years ago, in Qin and Han Dynasties, China began to print pictures on the cloth and dye it later. When the wax was removed, the pictures could be seen. In the Tang Dynasty, products of wax printing were exported to Europe and Asia. Later, with the further development of the economy in the Central China, new industry gradually took the place of hand-made operation. The wax printing technique was lost in one place after another. But in some remote areas, such as Guizhou, this precious craft passed down generation after generation by oral instruction for two reasons. One is that the place is hard to get to so there are not many cultural exchanges. The other is that the natural resources that could be used in wax printing are quite rich. For years, the product of wax printing which is simple and unrestrained, has been the ornament and decoration of clothes and rooms for the minorities in Guizhou.

The kinds of wax printing products are various. There are wall hangings, letter bags, bags, aprons, cushions, table-cloths, door curtains, cloth—made dolls and so on. The style is from abstract to realistic. The content varies from figures, flowers and birds, landscapes to calligraphy.

There is no ending for the pursuit of art. The folk artists keep on searching and studying and try to combine the art of painting, the art of calligraphy and the ancient folk art into a whole. The artists try to change the traditional view that wax printing is just a few pieces of cloth. They want wax printing to pass through the hall into the inner chamber as Hangzhou Silk and Suzhou Embroidery

46. Why was wax printing technique lost in many places according to the passage?

- A .Not many people liked products of wax printing
- B .People thought wax printing was just a few pieces of cloth

- A. Wax printing has a history of more than 2, 000 years
- B. Wax printing is popular with the minorities in Guizhou.
- C. The artists are trying hard to improve and promote wax printing.
- D. In the Tang Dynasty, wax printing technique was exported to Europe and Asia.

48 .Why can wax printing craft be handed down in remote areas?

- A. Because there are not many natural resources in remote areas.
- B. Because people in downtown don't like wax printing products.
- C. Because there are few cultural exchanges in remote areas
- D. Because folk artists in remote areas are more interested in wax printing.

49. By giving the examples such as wall hangings , bags . cushions . table-cloths, etc,the author intends to show that_____.

- A. wax printing is not as famous as Hangzhou Silk and Suzhou Embroidery
- B. there are many styles of wax printing

(B)

It has been found that less than one shopper in five makes a complete shopping list before going to the store. The reason for this is that seven out of ten of today's purchases are decided in the store, where the shoppers tend toward impulse buying. Buying groceries on impulse has risen for the past forty years, and this rise has coincided with the growth of self-service shopping. However, in grocery stores where clerks wait on customers there is much less impulse buying. It is hard for people to buy on impulse if they have to address a clerk

Psychologists have joined forces with businessmen. It is their job to persuade people to buy products which they may not need or even want until they see them attractively presented. It is discovered by the psychologists that shoppers want help in their purchases. Having so many choices confuses them, and they prefer the package that attracts them. Therefore, it is now more usual for food packers to pay attention to their package design. Attraction depends heavily on the position of the product on the shelf, however. Thus, persuading the shopper to buy is easier if the product is located at eye-level.

50. According to the information given in the first Paragraph, _____ make a complete shopping list.

- A. only five shoppers
- B. less than twenty percent of the shoppers
- C. only ten percent of the shoppers
- D. not even five percent of the shoppers

51. The reason for the above mentioned phenomenon is that _____.

- A. people have difficulty making up their mind before going shopping
- B. people don't know what is available in the store
- C. people tend to decide on buying products when they see them
- D. people are easily deceived by the attractive products

52. In grocery stores where customers are served there is less impulse shopping. This may be true

Because _____.

- A. the clerks ignore the customers
- B. the clerks are too eager to serve the customers
- C. the stores have to send the shoppers' purchases to their homes
- D. customers hesitate to ask for help if they haven't decided what to buy

- A. the shelves where the products are arranged in good order
