Meeting a polar bear

I put my day's supply of food into my bag and then began to take down the tent. Suddenly I heard a deep, long growl (嚎叫) from my dog Charlie. I looked at him and then in the direction he was watching closely. A polar bear!

It was a mother ____16____ by two cubs coming slowly towards me. They were 200 meters away. With a pounding (狂跳) heart, I picked up my flare (照明) gun and ____17____ walked sideways a few steps to Charlie. Without taking my eyes off the bear, I untied Charlie and, again walked sideways.

The bear, now only 150 meters away, wasn't stopping. Her cubs had dropped back but she kept going, while I tried to remember all the ____18____ that had been given. Keep eye contact, move sideways or forward, never backward, stay calm, don't show ____19____. Don't wound a bear and you'll make it ____20____ to control it. Never run. Repeating to myself, "Stay calm, stay calm," I fired a warning shot (射击) to the bear's left. The loud noise had no ____21____. She came around. I fired a flare, landing it a little to her right. Her head moved in its direction but she didn't stop. I fired another, this time dropping it right in front of her. She stopped, looked at the flare. She was only 30 meters away now.

By this time, I was so nervous that my heart could have been heard at base camp. The bear began to step around the flare, and I dropped another a meter in front of her. Again she ____22____, and then she fixed her tiny black eyes on Charlie, who was trying to reach her. She looked back at her cubs, waited, and then moved to my left in a half circle. I fired two more flares, trying to draw a line between her and me. She stopped again and seemed to want to ____23____ the line of flares but was unsure of the result and of Charlie, so she decided to stay ____24____. Finally, with a last long look, she walked north with her cubs behind her.

My hands were still shaking, but I now knew that I could ____25____ a bear in the wild bravely and stay calm enough to act properly.

B
My Dad

by Vicky Frye

If I could write a story,
It would be the greatest ever told.
I'd write about my daddy,
For he had a heart of gold.
I'd write about the lessons.
He taught me right from wrong.
He instilled (灌输) in me the values,
That one day I'd be strong.
He taught me to face my fears,
Take each day as it comes,
For there are things that we can't change.
He would say what's done is done.
He would say hold your head up high,
Carry yourself with pride.
Thanks to him, I am somebody,
I will never run and hide.
If I could write a story,
It would be the greatest ever told.
I'd write about my daddy,
For he had a heart of gold.

C

Scene 1

Lights come up on a village. A castle rises above a village. Villagers pass by, doing their business. Two stop when they see the beautiful Princess.

[Characters: Sarah, Mary, Princess, Tutor (私人教师), Guards, Scribe (书记员)]

Sarah: Isn't she the most beautiful thing you have ever seen?

Mary: True. She is perfect. (The Princess notices them talking about her.)

Sarah: Her parents must be truly good to receive such a treasure.

Princess: (Angry) What are you two staring (盯着) at?

Mary: (Nervous) We were just, ...

Princess: "You were just" what? Staring? Gawking (呆呆看着)? Why don't you go somewhere and mind your own business?

Sarah: Forgive us, Princess.

Mary: We didn't mean to make you unhappy. We truly hope you can forgive us. (Sarah and Mary rush away nervously.)

Princess: Yeah, well, forgive this. (She throws stones at them.) Hal Got them. (Laughs) That'll teach them.

Tutor: (He comes from the castle.) Must you treat the farmers that way?

Princess: (Pulls his hair.) I must!

Tutor: Can't you behave like a lady?

Princess: I will, if you will! (Laughs)

Tutor: Stop acting like this!

Princess: Don't speak to me like this, or I'll have Daddy cut off your head like he did to the rest of my tutors.

Tutor: I'm just... (She smiles at his change in voice. She throws another stone at a passing farmer.) I'm just worried about you. You don't seem to care for anyone or anything. Someday you'll insult the wrong person and you'll be sorry.

Princess: No, it's them who will be sorry. Guards! (Guards appear and she points to tutor.) Take him away.

Tutor: What? What did I do?

Princess: He makes me bored. Cut off his head. (Laughs as the guards pull him off.) So what is on my timetable today? (She snaps her fingers (打了个响指) and a Scribe appears in a hurry.)

Scribe: (Nervously trying to hold on to a number of scrolls (卷轴) in his arms.) Yes, Princess?

Princess: (Knocks all the scrolls out of his arms.) Read me my timetable!

Scribe: (Hurry to find the right scroll on the ground.) Well, you will have your hair cut at 9, a reading class at 10...

Princess: Enough! I want to have a party instead.

Scribe: But Princess,...

Princess: But what?

(Farmers stop to see what is going on.)

Scribe: But of course, I'll plan it for you at once.

Princess: Good scribe. (Touch him on the head.) You always keep your head about you.

Scribe: Yes, quite. (Leaves)

—Do you know what holiday falls on November

19?

—World Toilet Day, of course!

①Have you thanked your toilet today? Maybe take a moment to thank this useful invention. Unfortunately, many people around the world do not have good toilets. World Toilet Day started in 2001 to draw attention to the problem. Since then, inventors around the world have been hard at work on designs for better toilets. The goal is clean toilets for all.

②Why do so many people live without good toilets? One problem is water shortage. Traditional toilets use water to flush (冲) the waste away. But lots of places don't have enough water. And if there's no sewer system (下水道) or water treatment plant, the flushes might go into rivers or onto fields. For almost half of the world's population, flush toilets are just not practical. As a result, there are always different kinds of toilets that do not need to be flushed.

③Composting toilets might be a good choice. They do not need water, so they're good for areas that are dry or don't have sewer systems.

④Haiti's EkoLakay toilets look like a normal toilet. When you use one, wastes fall into different containers. Some plant parts, like peanut shells or shredded sugar cane stalks are added instead of flush water. This stops smells efficiently.

⑤A pit toilet is the oldest and most basic toilet, which is just a hole in the ground, maybe with an out-house over it. This is simple, but not very clean. Germs (细菌) can escape into the air and get into water. But replacing the pit with a septic tank (化粪池) is a big improvement. Septic pits are lined with plastic or clay, to stop germs.

⑥Tiger toilets get help from an unexpected partner—a kind of worms (蠕虫) on the earth known as tiger worms. These worms love to eat the wastes. Under a tiger toilet is a box with a screen in the middle. Solid (固体) waste stays in the top of the box, where the worms live. Liquid (液体) flows through small holes into sewer systems. Tiger toilets are simple to build. They are recently being tested in India and are proving quite popular.

⑦Educational ways have also played an important role in changing public attitudes towards good toilets. Schools and community programs are teaching people about the importance of them, encouraging behavior changes.

⑧The road to achieving world-wide good toilets is still long. On this World Toilet Day, let us continue to thank the convenience of the wonderful invention. By doing research on more efficient toilet technologies and raising senses of keeping clean surroundings, we can work towards a future where every person has a clean and safe toilet.

37. What does “the problem” in Paragraph 1 refer to?
