Hello! My name is Eric Miller. I'm a geography teacher. But now I teach English in a middle school in Beijing. I'm in the classroom now. I can see some things in the classroom. What are they?

There is a notebook on this desk. It's Jack's notebook. I see his name on it. A Chinese-English dictionary is on that desk. It's red. Whose (谁的) dictionary is it? I don't know. Thirty students have red Chinese-English dictionaries in my class. What are those under that chair? They are three pencils and they are Mary's. Is the short yellow ruler Mary's, too? No, it isn't. Mary only has a long ruler. It's Helen's. She has a short ruler and yellow is her favorite color. I can see a white model plane over there, too. Whose is it? I think it's Peter's. But where is Peter? Oh, he is in the school library.

(1) Eric Miller is a(n) _____ teacher.

- A. geography
- B. math
- C. Chinese
- D. history

(2) Where are Mary's three pencils?

- A. On the desk.
- B. Under the chair.
- C. On the chair.
- D. Under the desk.

(3) Who has a short yellow ruler?

- A. Jack.
- B. Mary.
- C. Helen.
- D. Peter.

(4) What can we infer (推断) from this passage?

- A. Jack's school is in Beijing.
- B. Eric Miller is a good teacher.

C.The students have a good time every day.

D.The red Chinese-English dictionary is Mary's.

A.friends

17.

When we get into middle school, we find that we can easily get angry with our parents and sometimes we argue with them. Although we know we love our parents, sometimes we'll have different opinions. Then how can we solve this problem? How can we keep close relationship with our parents again?

If we've had a fight with our parents, try to calm down first. We can spend some time alone. We can go to our own room, sit outside, or go for a walk. Take this time to think about what happened and how we felt about it. This will give us time to deal with our feelings and set free any negative feelings. In a word, it gives us a chance to control our feelings.

Then we can talk with our parents again. Sometimes we think our parents don't understand us at all. So we should pick a proper time when we're all calm. We sit down to talk about how we feel and what we need from them. We can discuss what we expect they'll do.

Of course, the communication is mutual. We should also listen to what our parents say. We can find out why they have these different feelings. We should also respond calmly when they say something upsetting. It's important that we should keep our cool. They're more likely to listen to us if we don't shout at them.

(1) 题完成句子; (2)、(3) 题简略回答问题; (4) 题找出并写下第四段的主题句; (5) 题将文中画线句子译成汉语。

(1) When we're middle school students, we even _____ at times.

(2) What can we do after a fight with our parents according to the passage?

(3) What should we talk about with our parents if we want them to understand us?

(4) _____

(5) _____
